(1) What is Communication?

Ans → Communication is an on going Process Which comprises transmission and reception of a message. Communication is a meaningful exchange in which Ideas and Concepts are transferred.

⇒ Derived from a Latin Word Communis which means to share the Word Communication means sharing of Ideas, Concepts, message and Words expressed through a language which is easily comprehension to the listener.

⇒ The intent of the sender provides a meaning to the Word and language used in Communication.

* Development of Communication *

Communication is a science as old as mankind.

Right from the beginning man felt the need to communicate. Initially, physical signs and symbols were used to transmit a message.

Gradually there arose a need for effective communication which led to extensive research by scholars and researchers.

With the passage of time, there was a shift in focus and various scholars began to study of communication. Four examples, four anthropologists, the study of body gesture in different culture became the focal point; four psychologists, the emphasis was on attitude social change, behaviour and its impact on communication.

⇒ Although some concepts of communication have undergone a radical transformation, some concepts have stood the test of time. Primarily among them is the mode of a sender. Which demands that some change be brought about in the receiver at the time of delivery of the message.

To be able to appreciate the concepts in Communications. Let us study the growth of Communication as a science from the time when Aristotle proposed the First Model.

(1)* The Aristotle Model *

⇒ Aristotle 1st gave a framework to the science of Communication. He proposed a simple model of Communication which had as its components: a sender, a receiver and a message. In his model the source or the sender was of primary importance. The process of Communication was one-way.

(2)* The Lasswell Model *

⇒ Lasswell extended the scope of Aristotle's models of Communication by laying emphasis on the channel which the speaker selects. He added the three factors on which to place emphasis: the speaker, the message and the channel. However, his model too proposed a one-way direction of Communication.

(3)* The Shannon-Weaver Model *

⇒ Shannon and Weaver integrated the concepts proposed in the earlier models and emphasized the importance of the encoding process which stated that the message should never be imparted in its raw form. It should always be encoded in a form i.e. accepted by the receiver. Though the flow of communication in their model was only one way, it had the vital component of feedback in it. E.g. → EMAIL

date 11/10/23
(4)* The Shannon Model → The best known model so far was proposed by Wilbur Shannon in 1955. He proposed three models of communication each one. The first was more or less in line with what had been proposed by Shannon and Weaver, it too laid emphasis on the encoding phase. The direction of the flow of communication too was one way.

⇒ In his second model, he extended the scope of his theory by stressing the significance of the experience between the sender and the receiver. Within the framework the sender needed to select a channel and transmitted the message is encoded in a form that was acceptable to the receiver. For the first time the receiver was taken into consideration.

⇒ The third model proposed by him was a major breakthrough in the field of communication. For the first time it proposed the significance of a response from the receiver. Together with the encoding of the message and transmission of the same through the proper channel it necessitated that receiver after decoding the message transmitted the response to the sender.

(5) * The Kautz - Lazarsfeld Model :->

They proposed a model which was shouted to mass communication. The sender encoded a message and transmitted information through mass media to an opinion leader who finally relayed it to the public. The important components of this model were the sender, the receiver, the message and the opinion leader. As it was directed towards mass media, the direction of communication was also one way.

(6) * The Westley - Maclean Model :-> In this model they suggested that there should be a sender who would encode the message to be transmitted to the receiver. On receiving the message, the receiver could decode it and then encode it again as processed information transmission to either the original sender or to other individuals in a modified form. Stress was laid on the following factors, the sender, the receiver and the feedback. The path of communication was circular with an in-built feedback system.

(7) * The Berulo - Model :-> In this model the sender passed on the skills and experience, encoded and transmit the message through one of the five senses. He was the first to emphasize the mode of perception or reception of the message. The major components of his model were the source (sender), the receiver, the meaning and the process. However, the direction of his model was only one way.

(8) * The Newcomb Model :→ Newcomb proposed the theory that Communication Work as a result of the reaction / response of individuals to each other and the topic discuss. The important factors in the process were the receiver and the meaning associated with the utterances made.

(9) * The Watzlawick - Beavin - Jackson theory :→
⇒ The theory proposed that the exchange of message in any kind of Communication was a result of the behaviour of the interactants.

They introduced a new element of meta-Communication together with receiver meaning and process in explaining the outcome of the Communication they were the first to propose that Communication was a two process.

(10) * The Rogers - Kincaid theory :→
⇒ Rogers and Kincaid suggested that individual needed to be linked to an another through networks created and the info. shared. The major components of their work were social network information and time the direction of this type of Communication was spacial.

* Principle of Communications *

⇒ Types of Communications

(1) IMPRESS

(2) Channels of Communication :→

Communication is a two way process in which:

- (1) There is a sender/encoder/speaker.
- (2) There is a receiver/decoder/listener.
- (3) Sender should encode and transmit the message.
- (4) Receiver should receive and decode the message.
- (5) Receiver should give a response or provide a feedback.

⇒ Types of Communication :-

It is of 2 types :-

- (1) Voluntary.
- (2) Involuntary.

⇒ In Voluntary :- The sender decides the nature of the message to be communicated and structure it before finally transmitting it to the receiver.

⇒ In Involuntary Communication Certain cues or signs unintended by the receiver for complete understanding of the message.

* IMPRESS :- IMPRESS is the key to the understanding of the principles of communication.

IMPRESS is used as an acronym for each letter standing for a particular aspect of communication for analogizing the basic requirement of effective communication.

I → Idea :- The first requirement of communication is the germination of an idea in the mind of the spoken. At any given time there can be lots of Ideas taking shape in the mind of the speaker they need to be Identified and arranged Properly. The sender must select the Idea to be must select the Idea to be Presented first. Shouting, analysing and arriving at solutions must be Completed Before the delivery of the message.

M → Message :→ The Idea to be Presented in the initial stage are immature in the mind of the speaker. To reach a stage of maturity they have to be first made real and then encoded in the form of the message. The encoding of the message should be in a form i.e Both Acceptable and Comprehensible to the receiver.

21/09/23

P (Pause) :→ The delivery of the message must be marked with pauses. if it is at Jet-speed without a pause or change in voice inflections, then it is sure to Confuse the receiver, Creating Problems at the stage of decodification. Pauses in the middle or at the end of the sentence are mandatory if the speaker wants the content of the message to be understood fully.

e.g. :→ A Panda eats shoots and leaves.
A Panda eats, shoots and leaves.

V.V.T

R (Receiver) :→ The receiver is the Individual at whom the Communication is targeted and is also referred as the decoder. Decoding of the message is independent on mindset of the receiver and the perception of the message. In Accurate Perception on the part of the receiver can lead to miscommunication.

'E' (Empathy): → Empathy means getting into the shoes of the receiver to understand of the problem. A human approach, an understanding of the people to be addressed, their emotions, sentiments, coupled with positive and generous attitude form part of an empathetic approach. It is more of a give and take relationship in which the sender makes the first move.

'S' (Sender): → The presence of a sender is necessary, who initiated the process of communication by transferring ideas to the receiver. The sender refers to the individual who begins the communication and is also called the encoder. Many factors affect the encoding process such as feeling, emotions, attitude and behaviour pattern.

'S' (Security Check): → The ideas in the mind need to be scrutinised by the sender before beginning the process of communication. All ideas must be listed first. These factors will prevent the speaker from making errors at the time of posting ideas which can then be presented.

* Channels of Communication *

Encoding or formulation of the message is

Date
22/09/23

Preceded by Identification of the path through the message is to be transmitted. In any Organization, the message can travel in three directions:→

(1) Vertical (2) Lateral (3) Diagonal

(1) Vertical Communication :→ In this form we have upward and downward forms of communication. Transmission of message from the management to the employees is referred as downward, and when the reverse occurs it is termed as upward communication. Successful business setup encourage a two way communication.

(2) Lateral Communication :→ This form of communication is found among members working at the same level. Collaboration and Cooperation are the key terms in horizontal communication. However, it could also degenerate into rumour, gossip and grapevine which could prove harmful to the growth of any business.

(3) Diagonal Communication :→ In large organization various tasks require support across function. Completion of project depends on the goodwill and cooperation of members across function. In such situation communication follows a ~~combination~~ combination of vertical and lateral path.

Date ___/___/___

* Process of Communication *

⇒ Basic Forms of Communication :→

There are different forms of communication by which message can be transmitted. An understanding of the different forms in communication and how they help in communicating will help in message composition and delivery.

(1) Oral Communication :→ Oral means stemming from the mouth. Message of the form of spoken words are referred to as oral communication. On most occasions purpose of the message can also be conveyed by the choice and use of words to communicate.

e.g. :→ (i) Shut the door. (Order)

(ii) Please shut the door. (Polite)

(iii) Will you please shut the door. (request is polite)

(iv) Could you please shut the door. (Capability)

(2) Written Communication :→ Written communication refers to the words that are written on a structure in the form of message. In organisation written communication is in the form of letter, memo, notice, report, email, etc. However, messages are transmitted in the written format, they acquire a formal nature. You have to take caution when drafting your written message. There should not be any scope for mistake.

(3) Body Language :→ Body language refers to the transmission of message through signals emitted by the body. Body language in almost all situation is involuntary. You may or may not be aware of the signals being emitted by a body. The receiver almost always is able to grasp the signal and arrive at a collective understanding of the message.
For ex:→ A firm handshake reflects a strong personality and direct eye contact indicates confidence in the self.

29/09/23
(4) Space / distance :→ The space or distance maintained with the receiver or sender communicates the nature of relationship between both. If the relationship is intimate, you stand or sit close to the person and as the relationship keeps getting further the physical distance or space keeps on increasing.

Researcher have pointed out four different spaces or zones that an individual maintain.

- (i) intimate :→ Which extend to $1\frac{1}{2}$ feet.
- (ii) Personal :→ Which extend to 4 feet.
- (iii) Social :→ Which extend to 11 feet.
- (iv) Public :→ Which extend beyond 11 feet.

(5) Voice Modulation :→ Voice modulation and inflections in the tone refers to the change in voice and speech patterns. Variations in voice modulation can communicate much about the feeling and attitude of the sender.
For ex:→ When you speak with high energy

You Communicate enthusiasm, involvement and interest in the process of Communication. In Construct When you speak with low energy or slow speed you thinking or not involved in the process and lack enthusiasm.

(6) Object Language $\Rightarrow$ Object Language refers to the message communicated by the object or the things that you carry on the self. For example $\Rightarrow$ A respectable dress Code, a good pen, a decent briefcase communicate class. Object Language always precedes oral communication.

(7) Picture / Symbol / Signs $\Rightarrow$ Picture, symbols and sign used or not used communication a message. if you decide to use picture or symbols while presenting insure that they add to the content and do not distract the receiver. Picture and symbols must be simple, conventional and easy to understand. Being creative and emotive in the use of picture and symbols can confuse other than simplifying the communication process.

* The Ten Commandments $\Rightarrow$ *

There are ten Commandments / mandates of effective communication. Strictly following the same can make your communication skills more effective, efficient and speedy.

(1) Clarity in Objective for Communicative $\Rightarrow$

Clarity in Objective for Communicative and the process is the first Commandment for effective Communication. it can be a two-fold process.

(i) Desire for further information.

(ii) Attempt to improve or modify the behaviour pattern or thinking process of the other individual.

(2) Clarity in Use of Language $\Rightarrow$ The language used for transmitting the message must be one with which the receiver is familiar.

An attempt to flaunt Verbal Competence will misfire. Communication will become ineffective because of difference in language our ideas will be either not understood or misunderstood.

(3) Quantum of Communication $\Rightarrow$ The amount of content in the message is extremely important.

Too much of it can faze the listener and too little can have a negative result as the message will not be understood entirely. Decide upon the amount of message communication. You wish to communicate should be decided before hand. Message must be just the right amount. Neither too much or too little.

date
03/10/23

Date ___/___/___

- (4) Choice of Adequate medium :→ The 'Best and the most appropriate medium for transmission of the message must be selected, be it Verbal or non-Verbal. Success is to change upon the receptivity, acceptance and Comprehension of the message by the audience.
- (5) Provision of appropriate Climatic Condition :→ The Physical setting must be right, that is remove physical or psychological noise. The former easily be removed or at least minimized. But little can be done about psychological noise.
- (6) Attentive listening :→ Often the speaker after presenting a point of Idea does not desire to listen to the other participant for communication to be effective it is important that the sender listens attentively to the co-participants feedback. Both the sender and the receiver should avoid marginal listening which mean listening to only bits and pieces of information.
- (7) Avoiding Unintentional Communication :→ Intentional or Unintentional Communication take place side by side. While the tone may be positive, signals emitted by the body may be negative. Attempt must be made to avoid frowns or signs of boredom.

(8) Action to Communicate Statement : → Actions speak louder than words. Remember actions have a greater impact than statements. Words are important but behaviour revealed through body language is more effective than statements.

(9) Development of Communication as a two way process : → Speaking and not listening to what the other person is saying. Convert communication into a monologue. Therefore effective communication needs minimum two participants who should be interact with one another. There should be transmission, reception, and exchange of ideas from both sides.

(10) Honing Communication Skills : → Though we communicate all the time there is always scope and room for improvement and further improvement. Even in either written or oral communication can create a negative impact in the mind of receiver. Hence, building awareness drawing up an action plan and conceptualizing on every details can help hone your skills.

* AIDS to Communication *
Communicative effectively is no mean task. There are number of principles that guide the communication process. 7 of them begin with the letter C and 4 with S.

7 'C' $\Rightarrow$ The Seven Golden Principles of Communications:

- (i) Completeness
- (ii) Conciseness
- (iii) Consideration
- (iv) Conciseness
- (v) Clarity
- (vi) Courtesy
- (vii) Correctness

(i) Completeness $\Rightarrow$ it refers to the quantum of information needed for making a message complete. For a message to be complete there are 3 steps $\Rightarrow$

- Include all essentials $\Rightarrow$ All essential information must be included to make communication complete. There may be lots of ideas in your mind, but not all of them can be called essential. Only that bit of information which fulfills the needs of the audience and meets the objective with which the communication was initiated is called essential.

- Satisfy all queries $\Rightarrow$ Information is considered to be complete only if it satisfies all questions of the receiver. When you are formulating the questions, anticipate the needs of the audience and the questions that may arise in their minds.

- Add value $\Rightarrow$ A message to be meaningful must be provided to the receiver. The quantum of information provided is based on the needs and expectation of the receiver. Completeness is judged by the conciseness of the message. Concise message can be developed by 1st

- Add Value :→ A message to be meaningful must be a Value Addition to the receiver. If the information being provided is known to the receiver the importance of the message get minimized.
- (ii) Conciseness :→ Comprehensibility of information does not mean that all information must be provided to the receiver. The Quantum of information provided is based on the needs and expectation of the receiver. Conciseness is judged by the Conciseness of the message. Concise message can be developed by 1st Collecting all information and determining its importance.
- (iii) Consideration :→ Consideration in communication is showing respect, sentiments, ideas, notions, concepts and values of the receiver. They and visualize yourself in the position of the receiver. Empathy with the receiver also concepts and language with which the receiver can relate and with audience. Use pronouns like you, we, our instead of emphasizing on I. Use positive words and use friendly show that you are interested in the receiver.
- (iv) Concreteness :→ Concreteness refers to being specific on the issue under discussion. Clarity of purpose enhance concreteness and specific use concrete words. Concrete words are specific to the situation and related to a definite time and place. Use of concrete words makes the communication powerful and action oriented. Realistic adjective specify numbers, facts and figures and cause the receiver with sufficient information to formulate judgement on the issue.

(V) Clarity :→ Clarity in speech and writing is a must if the message is to be accurately understood by the receiver. Clarity refers to clear perception of ideas and thoughts. Arrangement of points based on logic will help you achieve clarity. Use simple words. Simple word language and easy sentence construction are to be preferred to complex construction. Simplicity in choice of word and sentences makes the message user friendly. Write small paragraphs with one or two ideas.

(vi) Courtesy :→ Communication is the game of give and take. If you want the receiver to be polite and to listen you too must be willing to extend the same courtesy to the receiver. Use strategies of being positive in attitude approach and willing to listen to the receiver view point. Be factual since, diplomatic similarity in approach and communication helps in establishing relationship with the receiver. Be respectful and use the right tone.

12/10/23

(vii) Correctness :→ Information presented to the receiver must not only be correct but also be presented accurately. Errors in language, grammar or visual representation of facts can lead to miscommunication. The receiver can be misled if incorrect or incomplete information is provided. Use of correct language, if is important to use language that is simple so that there is no ~~confusion~~ in the mind of the receiver on the true impact of the receiver.

⇒ The Four 'S': ⇒

- (i) Shortness : ⇒ Follow to the Principle of Shortness. Sentences which are very long can make listening and strenuously painful exercise resulting and frequent wandering of attention.
- (ii) Simplicity : ⇒ The simpler of the message, the easier it is to comprehend.
- (iii) Strength : ⇒ The strength of the message is that it should not convey the idea that the communication is going to end up in a desultory peace of either conversation.
- (iv) Sincerity : ⇒ If there is seriousness and sincerity the impact of the message is also going to be judged as long lasting. Sincerity of the sender gets reflected in the composition of the message.

* Listening : ⇒ *

(1) What is listening?

On many occasion people think that listening and hearing are same the two activities hearing and listening involve the use of ears, but they are different. From the point of view of communication there is a major difference between the two terms, listening a process is more complex than hearing and involves an understanding of the spoken and unspoken words.

The hearing is nothing but a sense that helps you to receive sound wave and noise by ear. it is the power of receiving sounds. On the other hand listening is when you receive the sound wave and understand it by paying full attention to the words and sentence of the speaker. it is one's ability to correctly receive and interpret the message transferred by a sender in the process of communication.

The hearing is an informed ability but listening is a learned skill.

In hearing we are not aware of the sounds that we receive however in the case of listening we are completely aware of what the speaker is saying.

Hearing involves the use of the only one sense is ear. But listening involves the use of more than one sense to understand the message completely and adequately.

In the hearing we are neither aware nor have any control over the sounds. we hear on the other hand in listening we are Aware of what the other hand person is saying Saw we listen to acquire knowledge and receive information.

* The Listening Process :- *

⇒ Some one rightly said "Hearing is through ears"
 But listening is through the mind.

⇒ Listening is defined as a skill in which we receive sounds through ears and transform them into meaningful messages. Listening is a different because it requires concentration and attention and human mind is easily distracted.

⇒ The Cycle of Listening Comprises of two stages :-

- Encoding and transmission of message by the sender.

- Decoding and providing the feedback by the receiver.

⇒ Listening is said to take place when there is satisfactory execution at both the stages. Mis Communication comes when listening is hampered at the stage of decoding. In other words if the message has not been understood as was intended by the sender listening is hampered and process of communication fails.

⇒ Listening Process comprises three stages.

- Leveling

- Sharpening

- Assimilation

Date ___/___/___

- Leveling :→ The Process of Leveling is similar to listening at the time of listening the mind is kept open for inflow of information. Once the information is called in the mind, the brain according to its needs selects the information which are important and discards the information which are not important.
- Sharpening :→ Sharpening or focusing on of verbal inputs by the mental filter. Comprises the second phase of the listening process. Mental filters with in the mind is the process of sifting of information. Some information which are is focused on and rest is discarded.
- Assimilation :→ In the final stage, assimilation of relevant text takes place. All other information which the receiver does not find relevant it is discarded by the mind and thrown out. To minimize the withdrawal of the back of interest on partial listening the receiver should check and recheck with the speaker the message and the intent behind the words.

* Types of listening *

- (1) Passive listening :→ The physical presence but mental absence of the listener can be defined as passive listening. All spoken message are being heard but not really absorbed.

Absorbing of the Spoken Word Can happen only when there is sharpening and assimilation to the absence of these two processes meaning Full Listening does not take place.

(2) Marginal Listening $\Rightarrow$ Too much withering unneeded topic lead to marginal listening you listen to the entire message / Idea because you are expected in to so. Listening then happens at marginal Partial level and listener does not attempt to go beyond the understanding of the topic discussed. Marginal listening is a better form of listening than passive listening.

(3) Protective Listening $\Rightarrow$ Protective listening is an attempt by the receiver to view the world of the sender from limited personal perspective. Each individual has a frame of reference in which the perspective of the Co-interactant is absorbed or at least attempt to while listening the receiver tries to view and assimilate the contents of the presentation according to a personal frame of reference.

(4) Sensitive Listening $\Rightarrow$ Sensitive and empathetic are two terms which when used for listening can be almost same. In this form of listening, the receiver, able to understand the viewpoints of the speaker in exactly the same terms as intended. Part of the emphasis in sensitive listening is the ability of the receiver to match to viewpoints with those of the sender. In sensitive listening is attempt is made to understand meaning of the statement in relation to the perception and experiences of the sender.

- (5) Active Listening :→ In this form of listening the receiver absorbs all that is being said and also makes an attempt to verify all that has been said. A combination of sensitive and emphatic listening can produce very positive results as the receiver makes an attempt to understand both the intent the emotions of the sender. Listener will stay tuned to a presentation if the communication style is impressive and the content thought provoking.

Determinants to the listening process

- (1) Lack of Interest :→ The first in list of determinants is lack of interest. If an individual is not interested in the topic being discussed, no matter how much effort is put in there will still be lack of concentration.

- (2) EGO :→ Superiority Complex within an individual will again hamper the listening process. It has proved to be the 'biggest' communication block as there is both unwillingness and non receptivity to the message. The Reason for it is could be simple. The sender could be a subordinate or in a position which does not match the ego of the receiver.

(3) Involvement With the self :→ if the listener is preoccupied or caught up in personal thoughts, there would be problem in understanding the intention of the spoken words. if the listener is listening to the self he or she in almost all the cases misses the impact of the message being sent makes an effort to listen. Change your position so that you are sitting on the edge of the chair. it definitely helps in remaining attentive.

(4) Imperfect Past, Present tense and uncertain future :→ Lack of self confidence hamper the listening process. it may occur due some uncontrolled factors in the present environment of the listener or because of some past event. A lot of time is wasted on thinking about the imperfect past. Because of this the present as well as future becomes uncertain of the individual. Little does one really that in the process of getting caught up in the past, the present is lost. which has a definite impact on the future.

(5) Fear :→ Fear of an individual situation can close the mind of the effective communication. There is an ability to understand the hence impact of the intentions of the other participants. The first step to minimize this fear is to listen to what is being said in an accurate manner.

(6) Pure Conceived Ideas and Notions :→ Pure conceived Idea and Notions or overinvolvement in Person through prevent accurate listening and have a negative impact on the process. If one is conceived with the idea that whatever one is trying to say or listen to is what was in the mind will automatically shut down. It will definitely have a negative impact on the speaker's intentions and will lead to miscommunication.

(7) Stress :→ Working under stress can again hamper the listening process. In this case also mind is completely blocked and it becomes difficult for the participant to understand what is being said at that particular moment.

* Factors that help in listening *

(1) Sender Credibility :→ The quality of being trusted and believed in is an important factor on the part of the sender, which can act as an enabler or deterrent is the intelligent structuring of the content. Comprehension is greatest when there is familiarity with the language. The knowledge and capability of the sender coupled with Information of the organization in the mind of the receiver and hence receptivity of the message listening is naturally enhanced.

(2) Positive Attitude $\Rightarrow$ Positive attitude to and the sender or situation can be highly productive. Standing on a negative note can be unproductive to the listening process. It closes the mind to the ongoing process and participation in the communication process is marginal or passive.

(3) Concentration $\Rightarrow$ Concentration is the only solution to solve the problem of ineffective listening. If the speaker is boring or monotonous, it gets difficult for the listener to remain alert and concentrate. Concentration can only be achieved by a conscious desire not to miss out on any of the vital issues under discussion or consideration.

(4) Question-Answer Sequences $\Rightarrow$ Thorough question answer techniques loss in concentration can be minimized. With the increase in interaction the listening process also undergoes a change. Frequent exchange of ideas. Raising queries is again a very good strategy of breaking the monotony of an interaction.

(5) Positive Statement $\Rightarrow$ Positive statement made by the sender can also motivate the receiver to listen to what is being said. Positive statement like great team work our "excellent job done, keep it up motivate the receiver."

* Barriers to Communication *

Communication barriers are blocks and obstructions in the process of communication that hamper smooth flow of ideas and concepts. For smooth flow of communication it becomes essential to identify communication barriers, develop strategies for overcoming the barriers.

⇒ Sender Oriented Barriers :-

Sender Oriented Barriers refer to blocks and obstacles which the sender may face in the process of encoding the message.

(1) Grouping for the right message :- As a sender you have to figure out the quantity and quality of message to be delivered to the receiver. The quantum of the communication should be just right. If there is lack of coordination in thinking process the message is presented in bits and pieces.

Take a couple of minutes to think and structure your thoughts.

A solution to this problem is to view all receiver as the same level as the self.

Superior Attitude :- Superior attitude refers to a feeling of superiority in the sender.

06/11/23

"I know it all" attitude build barriers in communication and distance people. The receiver is not happy with the manner in which message is formulated and in the process to evaluate the intent of the sender. Misses out the content of the message.

(3) Lack of Collaborative effort $\Rightarrow$ Communication is a time process which can only proceed if there is equal support from both the sender and the receiver. The primary reason for the barrier is an "I" attitude excessive focus on "I-I did this", "I have achieved this" - creates a problem. To secure the support of the receiver and to make communication a collaborative effort, minimize usage of "I" and begin concentrating on "you" or "we".

(4) Mental blocks $\Rightarrow$ Mental blocks refer to preconceived ideas and notions which create a block in the mind and prevent the sender from being able to view the issue from the perspective of the receiver. Mental blocks can be removed by proper assessment of the situation and the people involved in the communication process. Only and understand the perspective of the receiver.

(5) Lack of language skills $\Rightarrow$ Lack of language skills refer to the inability to transmit the message that is understood by the receiver. While communication connects use of Language by appropriate choice of words is extremely important. "Speak the language of the receiver."

Language skills can be honed by interacting with the commonly used language and trying to gain command over the language.

(6) By Passing $\Rightarrow$ By passing means overlooking the meaning of the communication and process by literal meaning of the word the intent of the message is missed or communication is structured on the meaning of words.

This barrier can be removed if you understand the intent of the sender at that particular situation. The same message in different situation can have different meaning.

(7) Frame of Reference $\Rightarrow$ Each individual has a frame of reference or a perceptual zone on the basis of which thoughts are structured. The perceptual field is result of the environment or culture in which the individual grows and develops. Try and fit communication in the frame of reference of the other individuals.

Do not let past experience cloud your ~~physical~~ mind and prevent you from communicating effectively. Give a receiver a chance to listen to what other people have to say before you fit them in your frame of reference.

25/11/23

(8) Distractions :- Distractions are normally physical i.e. is a noise in the room or movement can distract the speaker. Distraction can also mental. When a sudden movement or an expression on the face of the receiver or a person may trigger or a set of ideas. Concentrate on the present situation and the people involved in the discussion. Create an impact on other participant and show your effectiveness as a communication.

(9) Quantity of Communication :- The message to be communicated must be just right or according to the needs of the audience. If there is too much content or too little the impact will not be right. If you deliver too much material, it will be an information is provided the audience will be uncertain about the true intent of the message.

Know the needs of the audience and structure your message so that the quantity of information is just right neither too much nor too little.

(10) Lack of Clarity :- A badly formulated message in which there is lack of clarity give rise to ineffectiveness in the message. The receiver is unable to understand the "why" and the "what" of the message. The receiver find the interaction a waste of time.

Date ___/___/___

Think, Structure your points before you speak. If you are quick and fast the audience is unable to grasp the true intent of your message.

* Receiver Oriented Barriers *

Receiver Oriented Barriers refers to block or obstacles in the mind of the receiver. Decoding becomes tough as these barriers hamper in the total grasp of the message.

(1) Mental Turbulence :- Mental Turbulence refers to confusion or disturbance in the mind of the receiver at the time when the message is decoded. It can be a result of a situation or interaction that has taken place on emotions and feelings at the time of message respectively. The receiver is disturbed and not in a proper frame of mind to receive the message. In situation of mental disturbance confusion with the sender the impact of the message.

(2) Ineffective grasp of message :- Ineffective grasp of message happens in situations in which the receiver is not very comfortable with the subject or lacks complete knowledge of the subject. The understanding of the message is faulty and inaccurate.

To minimize this the receiver should check and recheck with the sender.

(3) Distractions and Preoccupations :- Inability to grasp the topic completely can be a result of distraction or preoccupations in the mind of the receiver. There may be many thoughts swirling in the mind of the receiver, result of which only a part of the message is listened.

Whenever the mind is preoccupied begin to not do on points. It helps focus attention on the speaker.

(4) Difference in Reception and Comprehension :- When the message reaches the listener decoding starts in two phases. Listening to the literal meaning of the words followed by understanding the ~~principles~~ perceptual meaning of the message. If the two meanings match it is easy to focus the receiver to understand the message.

A good way of tackling the problem is to check and recheck with the sender.

(5) Tendency to evaluate :- A major barrier to the communication process is the tendency to evaluate on the part of the receiver. When the speaker is in the process of transmitting the message the receiver must make an attempt to listen carefully to all that is being said. However if the concentration gets ~~can~~ divided between the speaker and the content, the message is not grasped totally. Do not evaluate the speaker or the context while the message is being delivered.

Date ___/___/___

(6) Lack of interest :→ Lack of interest in the topic being discussed can create a barrier. It is not possible to be interested in all the topics discussed in an organization if you realize that the communication will help in the growth and development it will create an interest on the topic.

(7) Misunderstanding :→ Misunderstandings create barriers to communication. Your intention may be good at the time of communication but may be perceived negatively by the sender. Misunderstanding between individuals in the work place can create rift which if not corrected at the right time widens the distance and makes it almost impossible to communicate.

(8) Judgemental approach :→ Biased listening refers to listening with a judgemental or predecided mindset. You may have ideas about an issue or an individual and every time you listen to the individual your biases come into play. Check your understanding of the message with other people so that all biases are removed and listening is accurate.

(9) Lack of provision of correct feedback :→ If the feedback provided to the sender is inaccurate or it is not in tune with the intent of the message, it can create a barrier to the communication process. A good strategy: Four over Comming. This barrier is to request the sender to repeat the messages.

* Group Discussions And Interviews *

(Q.) What is Group discussions?

Ans. When more than two people communicate in a group, it is referred as GD. Group discussion is a method known and practised in both traditional and modern societies. In traditional rural societies in India and many countries the elders of the village or ~~community~~ Community use it for thinking certain decision on behalf of the Community.

In Modern Society, have developed GD as a tool to increase efficiency by giving people a sense of participation. GD was first introduced in Western countries.

It has now become an important and essential part of the selection procedure of some of the government undertakings, multinational corporation, services, selection boards and other recruitment agencies. It is also common features of admission test for management institutes.

* Qualification looked for in GDs *

⇒ Leadership Qualities :-

(A) Taking initiative :- To show leadership qualities in GDs. The participant must possess the capacity to take initiative during the course of the interaction. This could be done by adopting strategies such as beginning the discussion, pick up the threads at a cluster stage, asking other participants for their views.

Date ___/___/___

- (b) Ability to give direction :→ it is important to give some kind of direction to the Grp. if there is no substance in what is being said the process of initiating proves to be a failure. People speak without thinking try to collect and link the ideas and then speak. The group will be automatically drawn to you.
- (c) Taking the group along :→ The important role of a leader are not only to give direction but also to take the group along while it is important to initiate, it is equally important to make even and irregular contribution throughout the discussion.
- (d) Listening :→ Listening is the tougher than speaking as you are playing with the ideas of other participants. Leadership skills and listening capabilities are requirement listening would be irrelevant when the listener shows signs of absorbing assimilating structuring and finally summarizing the discussion.
- (e) Goal Fulfillment :→ Importance of a leader in a group comes only when the goal of the discussion has been achieved. Trying to join the efforts of all the participants in a fruitful manner is the task which only a leader could perform.

(f) Knowledge of subject matter :→ Importance of leadership qualities through good communication creates the first impact to sustain the impact the leader should also be sound in content and knowledge of the subject. To create an impression without sufficient information or correct data can be dangerous.

(g) Use of analytical abilities :→ The next step of trying to present an acceptable picture of the self is to use analytical abilities to the maximum. While it is simple to present data on an issue it is difficult to analyze and present in the way of discussion.

(h) Clarity of thoughts :→ Clarity of thought can be presented by concentrating on the core issue of the topic. The participants should not get hooked on the secondary issue. This could lead to unnecessary emphasis on unimportant points.

(i) Conviction and flexibility :→ What ever is being said should be stated with conviction. It often happens in a group that people communicate there without really believing in them. Conviction while speaking goes hand in hand with flexibility in approach and ability to appreciate the view point of other member in the group. If in the middle of the discussion a mistake has Been Committed and there is need to Connect the same Process with the required Connection. The Connection which must be made should be extremely subtle. The speaker has to accept the View point of the other Participants and change sides to the one with those who have a more positive understanding of the topic.

* Strategies for G.Ds. *

While Participating in a G.Ds. There are lots of dos and don'ts to be Considered. While Presenting Ideas in a group obtain all essential of Oral Communication.

⇒ DOS :-

(1) Keep it Short and Simple (KISS) :- The Kiss Principle keep it Short and Simple the most important. The descriptive mode should be avoided. The delivery should be crisp with one or two points being presented at a given point. This strategy is extremely important as it help the other Participants to be focused. Structure Your Ideas before presenting them to a group of Participants.

(2) Make even Contribution :- What is important in a G.D is that you make even Contribution rather than multiple Contribution. If you want to create a long lasting impression on the observers and the Participants often it is noticed that the Participants

One in rush to begin speaking which results in bad image of a participant with little or no clarity on the topic.

(3) Summarize Periodically $\Rightarrow$ Summarizing Periodically is extremely important as it helps in keeping the group focused. This strategy can be adopted by a participant who is not familiar with the topic but still needs to be listened to as an active contributor. The advantage of this strategy is that it helps you get the group focused and prevent diversion from the main topic.

(4) Deliberate and then deliver your point $\Rightarrow$ Every time you speak try to deliberate and then present your ideas. You should be careful and not in a hurry. Clarity of ideas comes through slow speech. If you start speaking too fast the rest of the participants may not be able to grasp. The true intent may be left and the true impact of the ideas may not be abs.

(5) Adhere to Principle of Politeness $\Rightarrow$ In a GD many participants begin speaking at the same time and would like to have their voice heard over and above yours. In such a situation you should give time to finish your point. However, in reality, it does not happen as several participants will attempt to push their way in the discussion.

and prevent you from completing your point you should take the opponents in a firm and decisive manner. However do remember that all politeness need to be adhere. Your please excuse me, I have a point to move and I still have not finished speaking should be in place. You should follow the basic norms of etiquettes.

(6) Provide Opportunities to others to speak: → At the time of the GD, avoid being magnanimous when it is a question of offering opportunities to other participants. If you decide to offer the floor to another person, you may not be able to regain the same. Such a situation normally occurs when you ask a question and wait for a response. The best strategy would be to ask close-ended questions or yes, no, questions.

(7) Substantiate Your Point :-> Substantiate points with example also is a very good strategy to be observed at the time of Rev. GD. You should make a point and then substantiate it with an example.

⇒ Don'ts :-

(1) Speak loudly $\Rightarrow$ Never speak loudly. Initially to make one self heard above the cloud noise in the GD can lead to screaming on the Parts of the Participants not only the tone becomes loud but also the manner of presentation becomes harsh and bearing. This move has a negative impact on the conf. of the participants as well as on the people monitoring the GD.

(2) Adopt a negative stance :→ Avoid taking a negative stance against any participants. However incompetent or ill-informed may be the appearance.

(3) Sit Casually :→ Never sit casually, while sitting push your body to the back of the chair. That will keep you alert. Keep your legs stationed firmly on the ground, right and left leg interlatched beneath chair. It will keep you firmly position.

(4) Flay hands :→ Hand movements should be restricted. It indicates that you do not need to use hands as props. When speak keep your hands on your lap. With the right a top the left.

⇒ Interviews :→

For any interview to be successful you an individual it is essential to understand the two phases of the interview.

(1) Preplanning (2) Facing the Panel

Before the interview do a thorough amount of preplanning which will boost your confidence and prepare you for the questions. Get some information about the organization

Date ____ / ____ / ____

Such as When Was the Company established
What are the Principles, Vision, mission, Achievement its Current Position in market etc.

* Personal information : → Together With Collecting information on the Company, Collect information on Yourself. Often Candidates Feel that they can Answer All the Question on the self. However it is not always the case as it is a Stressful
Situation and You may miss out on details
Which could make a major difference. Your Know Uedge of the self should Well match the Unecoval Presented before the interviewer.

Date
08/12/23

* Career Statement : → Once your Folder is Completed
With all the information you need to give to the interviewer, the next step is to prepare a Career Statement about yourself. it would deal With questions, such as the following : →

- (1) Why do you want to Join this Organization?
- (2) What is the that You have in mind, Once you Join the Organization?
- (3) How do you Plan your Career graph in this Particular Organization.
- (4) Where do you see yourself after 5 year from Now?
it Could Probably 'begin' by indicating your Current Standing in the Academic or Professional World.

* Dress Code : → Now it's time to Bother about the dress Code. Dark Coloured trousers to match a light Coloured Coat on the other way around. A smart tie with a tiepin, black or brown shoes with dark Coloured socks to match your suit would complete the dress Code. For the ladies, the same smartly done up in a suit smart with neat sandals would be the perfect dress Code for an interview. Being able to walk in a smart and brisk manner also helps in catching the eye of the interviewer.

* Real You detection Process $\Rightarrow$ The interview is a detection process in which the interviewer aims to find out if the statement provided in the resume match the real you. Most of the questions are going to be asked would relate your personality by your likes or dislike. The questions would be centered around the following issues.

- (1) The real you
- (2) Knowledge about yourself.
- (3) Ability to withstand stresses.
- (4) Ability to conduct transactions.
- (5) Ability to and just in the organizations.
- (6) Knowledge about what is going on in the corporate sector.
- (7) Knowledge about your company.

* Practice talking in front of the mirror: In the initial stages of preparation, your greatest critic and friend is the mirror which would tell you lies. Learn to practice

Speaking in front of the mirror. Whenever you feel the mirror is reflecting you as being too mild or aggressive, try changing your strategies so that they match the desired output.

* Facing the Interview Board *

(1) Familiarity With the Self :→ One of the easiest way of going about an interview is to familiarise yourself with your own assets. Some of the questions on the self are as follows:→

- (i) Tell me something about yourself.
- (ii) Why did you plan to take up B.C.A?
- (iii) Tell me something about your hobbies?
- (iv) What do you do in your spare time?
- (v) How do you think you will be able to contribute to the growth of the ~~org~~ organisation while there are some of the question the would be asked in an interview there are can be many more which can be asked according to the response that you provided.

12/12/23

(2) Skills :→ Prepare a checklist of at least five of each of skills, strength and achievement skills (should be related to the job being sought) like ability to organise, get work done, effective as a communication, like to work as a team, good knowledge computers etc. Strengths. Punctuality, dedication, ability to achieve much in a short span etc. Achievement :→ Awards won Paper presented, position held, extra achievements etc. Once they are listed in the most suitable ones can be retained and ~~best~~ strategies of...

(3) Strength and Weaknesses :→ While discussing strength be realistic and specific. They should not sound torn, fetched as they have been picked from some text book to sound impressive.

When you are preparing a check list of strengths; prepare a list of your weakness on a separate sheet. In most cases the question on weakness once you have prepared a list easy to convert it into a strength.

Weakness questions can be tricky. Work before hand on techniques to answer the questions.

(4) Logical thinking :→ While you lead the interview to ask you questions to while you have prepared responses, ensure that the progression is logical. Take a couple of minutes to think before you respond, there were sure to the interviews on the panel, sharp and quick you if you make illogical move in answering a question.

(5) Honesty in response :→ Before giving any response think carefully and logically what could be the reason of the question and why it is being asked. There is sure to be a particular reason for asking a question. Do not spend too much time on thinking you would be wasting the interviewers time ~~which~~ which be cause of not going to be appreciated. Whatever be the response be honest. Faking responses may seem to be easy way out at it is not good for interview.

* Interviewer's note: no more 2018 *

(6) Describe Yourself :→ The format of another question could be as follows :→ Describe yourself in 3-5 adjectives. The normal response of students is to begin elaborate discussion of the self. Some candidate may response with statements like "I am hard working. A problem of this kind can have two problems. One it is extremely stonetype and other it has already wasted three words. So, answer the question what has been asked.

(7) Any Questions :→ The last question which could to certain extent decide the fate of the candidate. "Do you have any questions." often the trap in which many of the candidates fall is to ask questions like "How soon do we get promotion?" or "What are the perks?" The best strategy in which occasion would be to condense your own growth in the organization. For example "What is the target that you expect me to achieve in the next three months?"

* Presentation *

⇒ What is Presentation?

Ans→ A Presentation is the process of presenting a topic to an audience. it is typically a demonstration, introduction, lecture, or speech meant to inform, inspire, motivate or to ~~build~~ good will as to present a new idea as product.

* Steps for an effective Presentation *

(A) Positive Attitude :→ The attitude towards the situation and the audience needs to be positive. The speaker should emerge as an assertive, positive Communicator, who has confidence in the group of people attending the presentation. A positive attitude sure gets reflected in the body gesture and oral communication of the presentation.

(B) Instilling Enthusiasm :→ One of the ways of displaying a positive attitude could be through instilling interest and enthusiasm in the audience by sharing information in as open manner as possible. This is step by step procedure in which the feedback on further information. If the sender is not excited the response will be equally lukewarm with minimal feedback.

(C) You are expert :→ The first thing which needs to be kept in mind prior to bringing a presentation is to make yourself aware that you are an expert in this area. Transmission of confidence to the audience increases the possibility of accepting you as an expert in the discipline. Body posture is one of the silent in the discipline. Body posture is one of the silent modes of communication which needs to be polished and perfected so that it enhances the overall effect of the presentation. Some of the presentation. Some of the negative body language can be as follows :
Nervous packing excessive movement/circling of hands, Covering the mouth while speaking
Using pen or pencil as pointer, lack of eye

Contact etc. The Participation and Concentration of the Audience depends upon Body Spont and the Voice inflections of the Speaker.

* Seven steps to a successful presentation *

⇒ There are seven basic steps for a successful presentation. The success rate is dependent on the amount of effort and labour that is put into making the presentation successful.

(1) Depending upon the objectives :⇒ Objective should be Crystal Clear. Do not stray or move away from the main point or focal area. The more you center around the main idea, the higher will be the conviction and greater the chance of success.

(2) Manner of presentation :⇒ Decide whether you wish to achieve your objective by a formal or an informal type of a presentation. This attitude of the participants will help you decoding the needs, the expectations of the audience and structuring of the message.

(3) Mode of presentation :⇒ Presentation should be such that the participant bond with the speaker and at no stage feel that the speaker is an alien in the midst or has something to say with which they are not comfortable or easy. In a formal presentation the presenter must be formally dressed, should maintain appropriate body language and use Energetic voice modulation.

In an Informal Presentation, the Presenter on the table, and spontaneous gestures. Content can also be written on a board and the mode of presentation can be more discursive.

(4) Presentation of Script :- The most timing part of a task is the Preparation of the script. While you have all the points and ideas well stored in the mind, they need to be given a proper format and structure. There should be clarity in the mind as to what move you would make - from start to the end.

Script the points on cue cards, which can be carried to the scene where the presentation is to be made. Cue cards can be printed with the topic, data and serial number.

5/12/23

(5) Preparation of Visual aids, Hand-outs and Feedback Forms :- Visual aids help a lot in business presentation. It is always better to prepare visual aids much in advance of the presentation. Leaving them for the last moment can on certain occasions force you to rush through the entire procedure. Since visual aids are used as support to the presentation, ensure in them create a poor impact in the mind of the audience.

Seeing is Believing holds true in the case of the presentation as the message

An screen remains with the audience for a longer time. The slides should be prepared neatly with no over writing or spelling errors. The material should be well spaced written in capital or blocks letters so that the listeners sitting at the back are also able to understand the content.

There should be five to six points on a slide with each point containing not more than five or six words. It is always better to use pauses at appropriate place so that they can absorb the contents of the visual.

Handouts : → Handouts should be given to the participants before the beginning of the presentation. These handouts should be extremely well prepared. The content of the hand-outs should complement your presentation. Don't even give hand-outs at the beginning of a presentation as they distract the audience.

Feedback Forms : → Feedback forms should also be prepared well in advance so that they can be handed to the participants at the end of the presentation.

Points which need to be elaborated in the feedback form are : →

- (1) Information about the audience.
- (2) Level of acceptance of the speaker.
- (3) Scope for improvement.
- (4) Inadequacies if any in the presentation.

- (5) Expectation from the session.
- (6) To what extent were the expectations achieved.
- (7) Gain from the session.
- (8) Scope for further interaction.
- (9) Suggestion if any.

(6) Rehearse $\rightarrow$ Unless you have rehearsed adequately you should not venture into making a presentation. The more you rehearse the better is your performance when facing an audience. In the initial phases rehearsed is important to do away with the element of fear. In the later stages, it helps in brushing up the stage style of presenting and revives your self-confidence. Practice your presentation a few times before the actual delivery. Take feedback about the presentation from a friend, colleague or family member.

(7) Format of a presentation $\rightarrow$ A presentation could naturally follow a six-tier process.

Stages	Purpose
(1) Ice Breaker $\longleftrightarrow$	Warming up.
(2) Opening $\longleftrightarrow$	Introduction to the topic.
(3) Discuss need for a new Idea $\longleftrightarrow$	Solicital willingness and Cooperation.
(4) The Idea $\longleftrightarrow$	Trust area
(5) Accuring Benefits $\longleftrightarrow$	Important, significance of the Idea.
(6) Summary / Conclusion $\longleftrightarrow$	Improve recall measured.

* Body Spout for Interview *

⇒ While the interview is in progress and questions are being asked and responded to the interviewers are also trying to gauge through the body language the true impact of the message that is being communicated by the interviewees.

* Positive Gesture *

- (1) Pleasant and smiling face
- (2) Eye Contact
- (3) Tea Break

- (1) Pleasant and Smiling Face :→ A Candidate With a Pleasant and a Smiling Face is sure attract the Attention of the interviewers. A Bright, Sunny and Open Look on the Face of the interviewers together with Knowledge Always Convey the bright and positive impression.
- (2) Eye Contact :→ There should be eye Contact because the interviewers for the maximum part of the time meets the eyes of the interviewers and the other members on the panel. The query should be responded by an initial glance at the interviewers who has asked the question and there should be a shift in the gaze to the other members on the panel so that the Candidate include all members on the interview panel while going to response.
- (3) Tea Break :→ Occasionally it so happens that it is tea-time and the interviewers are having tea. They may decide to offer you a Cup. if they ask you for choice "Would you like to have some tea". Your answer should always be in the negative Coupled With a Polite "Thank you". On the other hand, if they state "Do have a Cup of tea", or "Join us for a Cup of tea" your response should be in the positive "Thank you". Place the Cup on the table in front of you and let the tea sufficiently Cool before you decide to finally take a Sip.

Negotiations : → The final stages is that of Negotiations. The entire negotiation procedure is nothing more than "Monkey Business" or a game of tennis. Whoever is able to retain the monkey for a longer time will be the one who will have the upper hand in the negotiation. So whenever a question is asked try to give the response in such a manner that it appear as if you are in Control of the situation.

Example : → There can be different response to the questions.

Interviewer : → "How much salary do you expect?"

Interviewee : → Anywhere between Rs 17,000 and Rs 20,000 P.M.

Or

Rs 17,000 P.M.

Or

How much would give?

⇒ There is a major difference between the three responses. In the first instance, you have the ball in your court so you can lead the discussion in a manner that is going to be beneficial to you. In second response, you have blocked all avenues for further negotiation. Quoting one figure without giving a range can be dangerous move. In the third type of response, you have let go an important opportunity by giving the opponent the first move.

⇒ The Only thing that needs to be kept in mind is that the interviewer do not come with all the question prepared. Whatever queries they raise are based on the response you give. if your response are honest and straight forward and are such that you yourself understand and are comfortable with you should have no problems in the course of the interview. Things will move the way you want them to move.

* Paragraph Writing *

⇒ Paragraph Writing has been a part of the writing process in every student's life. Not only for any examination but also in our personal lives, we will need to write about different topics. Paragraph Writing is a simple process, and yet it needs special attention as you have to be short, precise and to the point.

(Q1) What is Paragraph Writing?

Ans → As, we all know, a paragraph is a group of sentences that are connected and make absolute sense. While writing a long essay or letter, we break them into paragraphs for better understanding and to make a well-structured writing piece. Paragraph writing on any topic is not only about expressing your thoughts on the given topic, but it is also about forming ideas about the topic and making it convenient for the readers to follow it. In English Paragraph Writing, it is essential to focus on the writing style, i.e., the flow and connection between the sentences.

Therefore, a paragraph must be written in simple language in order to avoid any interruption while reading. In order to write a paragraph on any topic you can refer to the samples given below and write a paragraph without any hindrance.

(Q2) How to Write a Paragraph?

Ans → In order to determine how to write a paragraph you will have to find a good topic and collect enough information regarding the topic. Once you find the supporting details, you can start forming the sentences, connect the sentences following a sequence, and find a perfect concluding sentence.

Find a topic sentence: it is the first sentence which is an introduction to the given topic. it gives the main ideas of what the paragraph would be about.

Supporting details: These are the details that can be collected from various sources. it comprises information related to the topic that gives strong support to the main topic.

Closing sentence: it is the last sentence that ends the paragraph and restates the whole.

idea of the Paragraph. it is 'Basically the Concluding sentence that gives the Basic Ideas of the Whole topic.

* Types of Paragraph Writing *

⇒ it is essential to know the type of Paragraph Writing before you write about any given topic. Therefore, Check the below information to understand the Various type of Paragraph Writing.

Majorly, therefore are four types of Paragraph Writing i.e. Narrative, Descriptive, expository and Persuasive.

Descriptive : → The kind of Writing basically describe the topic and Appeals to the Five senses.

Narrative : These kind of Writing are 'Basically a Narration of a story or a situation that includes a sequence.

Expository : → These kind of Writing are a definition of something. These Paragraphs require a lot of research.

Persuasive : → These kind of Writing aim to make the audience admit a writer's point of view. These are mostly used by the teachers to provide a strong argument.

* English Paragraph Writing Format *

⇒ There is no specific format for writing a paragraph, as it is a narration of your own thoughts, ideas, and vision. Also, there are no restrictions to your writing. But a paragraph is called a well-written paragraph when this sequence is maintained - a topic sentence, then the concluding statement.

⇒ Paragraph On Online Classes in 150 Words:
E-learning and ed-tech companies are the new beginning that will revolutionise the whole education process. Online learning has become more convenient with the use of advanced science and technology. In this changing world, online classes have become more accessible. Online classes have made our learning process more manageable with our busy schedules. Online classes have been beneficial to students who do not have access to proper schooling and quality education. Ed-tech platforms are now helping students as well as teachers with different study materials, various online courses, etc. at a very reasonable cost so that education can be accessible and available to all grades of students. Online classes help students and teachers excel academically even better than offline classes because they get their own space for learning. They can learn in their own comfort zone. During the pandemic, online classes have been beneficial to the students and their parents to keep the children engaged with their studies.

* Part of Speech *

→ Every Word in English Can be Classified as One of eight Parts of Speech. The term Part of Speech refers to the role a Word plays in a sentence. And like in any Workplace or any TV Show with an Ensemble Cast, These roles were designed to Work together. (3)

* The 8 Parts of Speech : →

(1) Nouns : → A noun is a Word that names a Person, Place, Concept, or Object. Basically, Anything that names a "Thing" is a noun, Whether you're talking about a Basketball Court, San Francisco, Cleopatra, or Self-Preservation.

Nouns Fall into Five Categories: Common nouns and Proper nouns. Common nouns are general names for things, like Planet and game show. Proper nouns are names or titles for specific things, like Jupiter. (4)

(2) Pronouns : → Pronouns are Words you substitute for specific nouns when the reader or listener already knows which specific noun you're referring to.

You might say, "Rachel was supposed to be here at eight," then follow it with "She's always late; next time I will tell her to be here."

a half hour earlier."

Instead of saying Rachel's name three times in a row, you substituted she and her, and your sentences remained grammatically correct.

(3) Adjectives :→ Adjectives are the words that describe nouns. Think about your favourite movie. How would you describe it to a friend who's never seen it?

You might say the movie was funny, engaging, well-written, or suspenseful. When you're describing the movie with these words, you're using adjectives. An adjective can go right before the noun it's describing ("I have a black dog"), but it doesn't have to. Sometimes, adjectives are at the end of a sentence ("My dog is black").

(4) Verbs :→ Go! Be amazing! Run as fast as you can! Win the race! Congratulate every participant who put in the work and completed!

Those bolded words are verbs. Verbs are words that describe actions, like running, winning, and being amazing.

Not all verbs refer to literal actions, though. Verbs that refer to feeling or our states of being, like to love and to be, are known as nonaction verbs. Conversely, the verbs that do refer to literal actions are known as action verbs.

- (5) Adverbs :→ An adverb is a word that describes an adjective, a verb, or another adverb.

I entered the room quietly.
Quietly is describing how you entered (verb) the room.

A Cheetah is always faster than a lion.
Always is describing how frequently a cheetah is faster (adjective) than a lion.

- (6) Prepositions :→ Prepositions tell you the relationship between other words in a sentence.

You might say, "I left my bike leaning against the garage." In this sentence, "against" is the preposition because it tells us where you left your bike.

Here's another example: "She put the pizza in the oven." Without the preposition in, we don't know where the pizza is.

- (7) Conjunctions :→ Conjunctions make it possible to build complex sentences that express multiple ideas.

"I like Peri Peri sauce. I like mustard sauce. I don't like chilly sauce." Each of these three sentences expresses a clear idea. There's nothing wrong with listing your preference like this, but it's not the most efficient way to do it.

Consider Instead: "I like Peri Peri sauce and mustard sauce, but I don't like chilly sauce."

In this sentence, and and but are the two conjunctions that link your ideas together.

(8) What is Interjection?

Ans → An Interjection is a word or phrase that is grammatically independent from the words around it, and mainly expresses feeling rather than meaning.

Oh, what a beautiful house!

Uh-oh, this looks bad.

Well, it's time to say good night.

Actually, um, it's not my dog.

Shoot, I thought I'd fixed that.

I can't believe I lost the key! Ugh!

Interjections are common in speech and are much more common in electronic messages than in other types of writing.
